SDSU Linguistics Student Association Presents:
2018 Annual Spring Colloquium

Featuring Special Guests:
Prof. William Salazar-Ríos
Decano - Universidad Santiago de Cali
Approx. 10 am
Professor Salazar has been teaching and developing the curriculum for didactics courses at the Universidad Santiago de Cali which are key components of the Licenciatura en Lenguas Extranjeras: Inglés - Frances (Bachelor of Teaching English and French as foreign languages). He will be presenting select approaches developed while teaching didactics to Spanish L1 students of applied linguistics and strategies for teaching English and French.

Dr. Dan Silverman
Associate Professor - San Jose State University
Approx. 1230 pm
Traditionally, sounds (segments, or phones) are considered phonologically related provided (1) that they are in complementary distribution, and (2) that they are phonetically similar. Instead, Dr. Silverman argues that the only criterion that matters in the determination of phonological relatedness among submorphemic elements is (3) that phonetic properties (of any shape or size) alternate (they substitute for one another when morphemes attach.

Saturday, April 28, 2018
8:30 AM – 2:00 PM
Scripps Cottage
San Diego State University